Antique French sweets box, Boite à Dragées. These were precious containers for holding sugared almonds, sold as gifts or for special occasions. They are distinctive for their decorations under glass, reflecting the changing styles and tastes of an era. Circular in shape, they depict a rural landscape near a tree and mountains in the background. Two dachshunds are depicted in the center. In good condition. The box is entirely made of cardboard with two brass rings at the ends and printed and gilded cardboard ribbons along the edges. The reverse-painting decoration (or under glass) consists of painting on the back of a transparent sheet. France, early 19th century.
